

TROUT LIFE CYCLE

Mature trout deposit eggs in gravel nests called redds.

Fingerlings grow to mature adults.

Eggs hatch in a few months and are called alevins.

When the yolk sac is gone, the fry emerge from the gravel.

Alevins remain in the gravel, living off the yolk sac.

Fry reach fingerling size (about 3 inches) after several weeks, depending upon water temperature and food.

